DeWitt Stern is closely involved with the Appraisers Association of America (AAA), a national association of certified appraisers specializing in the fine and decorative arts. Seasoned member and current Board President, Deborah Gerstler Spanierman, offered us her insight into the importance of insurance appraisals, and the criteria for ensuring yours is properly and ethically prepared. See her feature below for expert advice on Expert’s Corner:

Insurance Appraisals
Errors & Omissions
The White House Collection

So you have Fine Art property insurance. But what about insurance coverage for how you handle your fine art transactions? If you are a business, you are exposed to the risk of Professional Liability suits that your property policy doesn't address. Errors & Omissions (E&O) suits are more prevalent now than ever, and we want to make sure you're adequately protected. To help you understand your own risk exposure, we've outlined

On Display:

As election day looms on the horizon, it feels only natural to reflect upon the First Family's time in the White House. As the Obamas prepare for their next chapter, we find ourselves asking: what exactly will they be leaving behind? Here's one answer that might surprise you: a seriously enviable and diverse collection of art. Balancing tradition with a taste for the modern, the Obamas brought a contemporary flavor to a historically stately collection.
appraising your assets to protect them as such.

We highlighted some of their personal selections below.